D.A.Buzz: What made you to want to learn ### how to ride a unicycle?

A: I saw some unicyclists in a parade, and I really liked what they were doing. So I called up and found out where they practiced. Then I started going to practices.

D.A.B.: What's it like when you fall?

A: When you fall, you usually land on your feet. I have some scars on my knees, but that's about it.

D.A.B.: Do you have to have strong legs to ride a unicycle?

D.A.B.: What tricks can you do?

A: I can ride backward, "walk the wheel" (move the wheel with my feet to make it go instead of pedaling), pedal standing up and ride one-footed.

D.A.B.: What was your most embarrassing moment?

A: One time when I was practicing with my club, I really wanted to beat this one guy. But right before the finish line I fell flat on my face and scraped my knees really bad. I was so embarrassed I just stayed there, facedown on the pavement, right in front of the finish line.

D.A.B.: How fast can you go?

A: About as fast as a kid can run.

For Klingons, their makeup call can be as early as 4 a.m., 'cause it takes about two hours to do their makeup. They usually use really tall. large actors for Klingons. They call the head gear a "turtle shell "

"Why is Worf's child's hair straight when all the other Klingons' hair is curly?"-Erin Because Worf is Klingon and his wife is half-Klingon.

"Why is Worf's hair short when all the other Klingons have long hair?"-Malcolm Because being in Starfleet is like being in the military. You have to be neat. You have to keep your hair like in a crew cut, Klingon style.

BEFORE

"This is neat—right now we're two of the few kids who know that there're no real buttons. They're just part of the wall."

ACTION! A loud buzzer sounds when they begin filming. While the scene is being filmed, a red warning light stays on.

CHOW TIME. The actors usually have to be on the set by 7 a.m.; earlier if they have a makeup call. Lunch is always six hours after they start filming.

TRICK TRICORDERS.

Dr. Crusher's instruments, called tricorders, are hand-held computers. There are two kinds, plastic and wood. A plastic tricorder is used in scenes where the tricorder is in action: It's heavier and has flashing lights. In rehearsal or when it's on Dr. Crusher's belt, it's wood, SUBSPACE STATION. The swing set was transformed into a remote subspace relay station for a recent episode. This is where Geordi fell in love with a Starfleet captain with a mysterious past.

FIRST SET WE VISITED: the captain's quarters. There is a circular fish tank protruding from one wall. Erin said. "I always wondered if that fish tank was real." It is-it has a real tiger fish named "Dr. Livingstone." He's poisonous.

head? Is it hard

Our D.A. reporters found out that the visor isn't the only cool thing about Lieutenant Commander Geordi La Forge, LeVar Burton, who plays Geordi, is an award-winning actor and a real cool guy.

Would you like to see Geordi's sight permanently restored?

If it meant him seeing like evervone else. I'm not sure that would be a good thing, because Geordi sees more than everybody else right now.

How?

He sees all of the electromagnetic spectrum—from infrared to X-ray. He sees a hundred million times more than normal human beings do. And he sees it all simultaneously. Believe me, his condition ### to see through?

Well, the thing on my head is a VISOR-that stands for Visual Input Sensory Optical Reflector. When I put the VISOR on, I can barely see what's going on on the set. We attach it by screwing it into my head.

You screw it into your head? You mean like through your skin?

Well, we try not to screw it in so hard that it actually punctures the skin. It stays on by pressure. If I wear it too long I get a headache.

I know they make Geordi's eyes white by using contact lenses when he takes off his VISOR. Can you see when you wear those? No. The lenses are so thick and opaque, I'm completely blind.

Is it scary?

It can be scary, but it's also exciting. When I put the contact lenses in and I'm blind, it's those moments when I have the most in common with Geordi, Because when Geordi takes the VISOR off, he doesn't see anything either. I'm experiencing the world iust as Geordi would.

Why isn't Geordi on the bridge anymore?

In the first season he was the pilot. But the ship is so sophisticated that the producers said it could fly itself. So the problem was, what is Geordi's contribution? For information we go to Data. For anything having to do with emotions. Troi is the expert. Captain Picard is our leader and father figure. Commander Riker is his right-hand man. We decided to try Geordi out in the engineering department, and that really worked out well.

A WHALE OF A TALE

DIVER TOM CAMPBELL knew what the call was about before he answered the phone. A whale, accidentally entangled in fishing nets off the California coast, needed help. Tom grabbed his gear and hurried out to meet other members from the whale rescue team.

The grey whale was exhausted and in pain.
Every time Tom and his team tried to get near her, she would roll and dive. Finally divers were able to get close enough to start cutting the nets.

"But she went crazy every time someone touched her,"
Tom said. She'd thrash around the net, throwing divers out of the water with their masks and mouthpieces flying. But the real danger was she could plunge at any minute, dragging her rescuers down with her.

"We were losing daylight fast, and we had a lot of net to go," Tom remembers. Then suddenly

CALLSON

Your breathing equipment working-and you are deep beneath the ocean's surface. A whale the size of the Goodyear Blimp threatens to drag you to the bottom of the sea. Even the brayest underwater explorers face these kind of dangers in their adventures. Here are three of their stories.

the net popped, and the whale surged forward free at last! Tom and his team cheered wildly. The last thing they saw was her huge tail as she disappeared in the ocean twilight.

Don't Have A Cow, Man

UNDERWATER

photographer Carl Roessler and his friends traveled to the South Pacific Islands to meet Dudley, a 500-pound dugong (sea cow). Dudley was famous because he liked to play with people. "We were in chest-deep water, and Dudley would swim up, stick his nose in our stomachs and toss us in the air, just like beach balls," Carl laughs. "It was great!"

But one day, Dudley decided to play a new game. He swam up to Carl, hugged him with his fins, pushed him underwater and pinned him to the bottom! "I was four feet from the surface, squashed in the sand by this massive animal. I knew if this moose didn't get off me, I'd drown."

Luckily, after a very long minute, Dudley got bored and swam away. Carl shot to the surface, "sputtering and coughing." Although he laughs about this now, he learned his lesson: "Even the tamest animals can surprise you."

MALFUNCTION JUNCTION

THIS IS NOT THE PLACE TO HAVE any problems, Richard Kohler thought as he and his partner, Pete, dove toward the sunken ship. After a 12-hour boat ride to this wreck, the treasure hunters were anxious to fill their bags with china and other valuables.

They swam through tight turns and narrow passages before Richard spied a cabinet filled with loot. He was busy stuffing his treasure bag when he took a breath and sucked in cold, muddy water. He slowly tried to take another breath.

No air, just water. Panic!
He spit out his mouthpiece and gave Pete the out-of-air signal by drawing his hand across his throat. Richard's air hose had broken away from his mouthpiece. They had to get out of the wreck—fast.

They crawled slowly through the maze of twisted metal. Finally, they were safely on the surface. "I was never so glad to end a dive," Richard says. "But I grabbed my bag before we left; there was no way I was going to leave my treasure!"

Henri Cosquer was in trouble. Deep trouble.

NEXT STOP:

HE THOUGHT IT would be fun to explore the tiny passage he found in the underwater cliffs. He squirmed his way through the supertight tunnel that twisted and turned through a rock wall. The slightest brush with the tunnel bottom made a blinding cloud of sand that his light couldn't pierce. He knew if he panicked he'd be trapped in this underwater coffin forever. And he had no idea how long the tunnel was.

Finally he found an opening where he could stand up. It was a huge cave. He took off his mask and mouthpiece, gulped air—then noticed something: Someone had been there before.

Top: Henri at the end of the tunnel. Bottom:

Cameramen brave freezing water to get a good shot of the cave ceiling.

Top: Does this look like an 18,000-year-old drawing of an animal to you?
Bottom: Henri's

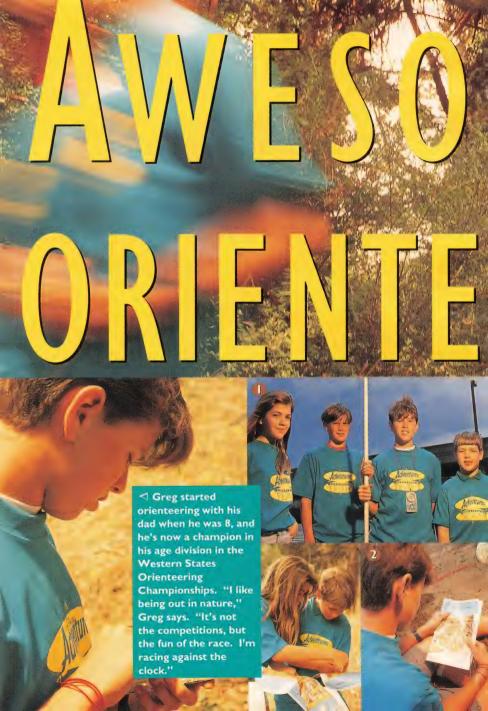

Human handprints were etched into the cave's wall. Next to them were charcoal drawings of extinct animals. Henri wanted to keep exploring, so he kept "his cave" a secret.

When three divers died in the undersea tunnel six vears later. Henri knew he had to tell people about the cave. He showed it to French archaeologists. Their verdict: The cave drawings, made by prehistoric people, were 18,000 years old! Henri's cave is the only one with prehistoric art that has an undersea entrance.

The tunnel is so dangerous that it's been sealed. Now Henri's secret cave—and the amazing paintings he found—are forever off-limits to the world.

THE ICE AGE

The DISNEY ADVENTURES
Orienteering* Team raced against expert orienteers in wild,
unfamiliar territory filled with cannons, tanks and old Army barracks. Here's what happened....

Our awesome D.A. Orienteering Team included Joelene Ellis, Greg Fleishman, Bo Felix (all 12 years old) and Daniel Lowd (11). The competition was held at San Francisco's Presidio, a historic Army base next to the Golden Gate Bridge.

All the competitors were given a topographic map (see box, Page 55), which they studied. 2
Their mission: find the course's 10 check-in points; punch a card to prove they'd found it; and finish the mile-long course faster than anyone else.

Excitement building, they had one last check of their compasses, then headed to the starting line. The starter called, "Start!" And they were off! 3

The D.A. team broke into pairs and started off, scanning *Orienteering is a sport in which you use a map and compass to find your way through unknown territory.

the landscape and looking for a road or a field to use as landmarks.

Partners Joelene and Daniel jogged quickly. An open area was marked on the map. "This is it!" Joelene yelled. But they weren't sure if the check-in point was to the right or the left of a nearby building. They tramped down a hill, through dried grass, but still couldn't find it. 4

Joelene frowned at the map then spotted where they had gone off course.

"Over there!" she shouted, pointing to an old Army barrack. They dashed toward the check-in point to make up for lost time, and quickly punched in. 5

Meanwhile, Greg and Bo searched for their next check-in point 3 that was "on a tree near the tank." So they started looking for something large, round and filled with water. They laughed when they saw the tree near an Army tank, the kind that rolls over battlefields and shoots shells. Every orienteering course has its surprises.

In the end, too much time had been lost and the D.A.
Orienteering Team members weren't the first to cross the finish line. But they weren't disappointed. As Daniel put it: "You get to use your mind and your physical skills. It's addictive.
And it's fun."

Dozmo's bummin' 'cause he says I don't write about him enough. OK, Doz, you asked for it....

I went over to his house the other day. Let me just say this: My room is messy, but Dozmo's looks like The Wizard of Oz cyclone hit it. Bad.

And there was Dozmo, lying on his bed trying to burp. He told me that he read somewhere that you can't burp while lying on your back. For whatever reason, he didn't believe it, so he decided to prove that theory wrong. I noticed he had a six-pack of soda by the bed and he'd already downed four cans.

"Hey, Doz," I said. "Wanna rent a movie or something since it's raining?"

Dozmo didn't answer. Instead he asked, "Did you know that the distance from the inside of your elbow to your wrist is about the same as the length of your foot?"

"Let's get Predator 2," I said. "I've never seen it."

"See if it's true," said Doz.
"Put your foot up to the inside of your arm."

I pretended that I didn't get what he was talking about.

"Like this," said Dozmo, sitting up. Before he could show me what he meant, I heard a rumble from his stomach and then out came the biggest, loudest, grossest burp you've ever heard. And he wonders why I never write about him. Hope you're happy now, Doz.

Lately a lot of you guys have been asking about weird body noises. I'm not gonna ask why, but here are the answers.

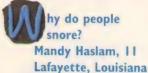

ow come your stomach growls?

Michele Hopkins, 10 Rosemead, California

Although your stomach growls when you're hungry, it can also growl after a big meal. The sounds you hear are your stomach muscles churning stuff around—food, liquid, gas, digestive fluids—kind of like a mini-washing machine. This churning breaks down the food, making it easier to digest. Your stomach growls when you're hungry because it starts churning in anticipation of your next meal.

Snoring happens when people breathe through their mouths while they're sleeping. Air rushing in through the mouth causes the soft palate—the tissue in the roof of the mouth near the throat—to vibrate. This vibration is what makes all the noise. If somebody's mouth is really hanging open, their lips, cheeks and nostrils may vibrate, too. And snoring seems to be worse when people sleep on their backs.

Next month I'll tell you about Lizzie and Blubb trying to build a skyscraper. 'Til then, play hard and think deep.

Q: How many cards do you own?

A: I have cases and cases. It would be in the thousands.

Q: How did you get started collecting?

A: I collected cards as a kid, but I really got into it when I was playing. During an all-star game, I went out of the game in the fifth inning and started getting other players' autographs.

Q: Where do you get your cards?

A: I get a lot of my cards in trades.

I've spent as much as $30,000 at one time on cards.

Q: What are some of your favorite cards?

A: I have the Goudey set from the '30s with Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Ted Williams. I guess my favorite set would be the '69 Topps because it has the last card of Mickey Mantle. Of course, another favorite is the first card to feature me.

Q: What's the most valuable card you own?

A: A Topps '52 Mickey Mantle. It's worth about $35,000. I also have a '51 Bowman Mantle.

O: Any advice for collectors?
